

Code of Conduct 2010

Updated in July 29, 2010

Be professional; keep my composure

*Even the referee's biased call is also a part of a game.
Do not regard anything else but my ability as an excuse of my failure.*

Become a man who have a breakfast meeting with Barack Obama, discuss the prospects of global economy with Warren Buffett, go clubbing with Rain, and workout with Sunghoon Choo.

Open a day an hour earlier and put an end to it an hour later. (8:00 ~ 24:00 in 2010)

*Never rush. Plan cold and move instinctively.
(Allocate 80% of my time for mapping out things to do and the remainder for a decisive action.)*

Value family and friends as much as my life, and do not talk of other's faults

Do not leave the reluctant things behind, and take the initiative no matter where I am.

Read one book and compose one essay every week.

Do not talk big. Keep my word even if I have a knife at my throat

*Daily completion leads to the completion of life.
Concentrate on making today complete, keeping in mind life could end even tomorrow.*

A man is neither higher nor lower than other. Be perceptive so as to see through the essence.

Be of decent conduct, and maintain a quite but convincing voice.

Trust myself, and do act as I believe.

Be unpretentious, and do listen to and learn from everyone who I meet.

Refrain myself from surfing portal sites and emailing.

Be prepared. Go to a fight with a built-up victory of certainty.

Greet all with a big smile and be full of vitality each and every moment.

Carpe Diem

Read up this code of conduct every single day.
